Tony Perrin is a bench artist based in Nashville, TN. The journey to establish Lock & Key has been nothing but unconventional and he would have it no other way. A professional dancer, Tony worked in the Los Angeles entertainment industry beginning at nine. During that time he was taught the artisan tradition of bead, painted and learned how to sew. While his Mother was a genius with a glue gun, Tony knew if he was to have dance costumes he was going to thread his own needle. While studying at the dance conservatory at NYU, his mentor passed away, and Tony was gifted the loom. Due to a dance injury Tony found himself in the New York fashion industry working for Ralph Lauren, Isaac Mizrahi and Calvin Klein to name a few all while attending the Fashion Institute of Technology. Tony and his wife then settled in Nashville to raise their family and allow Tracee to pursue a song writing career. During this time Lock and Key found its roots. Now in its sixth year Lock & Key has been lauded for elevating a craft material to fashion jewelry status, while never losing the brand's authenticity and story.

Each piece is hand crafted in Lock & Key's Germantown studio and is proud to keep production in the United States, training the next generation of artisans. While working with bead weaving and sculpted bronze or Sterling silver each piece has a story to tell. Each pendant begins as clay with micro particles of metal. After refining the sculpt, it is fired binding the metal together and burning off the clay. Finished with semi precious stones, the results are beautiful wearable art. Every piece is finished with a small lock charm honoring the historical person it was inspired by.
